This is... The Pete Siers Trio

The Pete Siers Trio focuses on the iconic style of Gene Krupa and the trio he formed with clarinetist Benny Goodman and pianist Teddy Wilson. With its driving beats and high level of energy (and no bass player!), the Pete Siers Trio puts its own twist on the swing era, drawing on the group's diverse background and extraordinary musicianship and experience.

Pete Siers is an accomplished jazz percussionist known for his hard-swinging sound and dynamic versatility. A resident of Ann Arbor, Pete performs throughout Michigan and regularly tours the United States. In addition to his recording and performance career, Pete has also taught jazz drumming for over 25 years.

Dave Bennett is often referred to as a modern day

Benny Goodman, but his skills and experience make him much more. Bennett is a modern prodigy of the clarinet, being mostly self-taught beyond high school. Growing up in Waterford, Michigan, Bennett gained early renown at 17 when he was chosen to perform with the Count Basie Orchestra.

Tad Weed is a powerhouse pianist who has played with jazz greats ranging from John Patitucci to Woody Herman. His artistically rich and diverse background allows him to command a wide range of styles, from Be-Bop to the Blues, and from Funk to the Avant-Garde. He has played concerts, clubs, television and radio around the world. Tad is also in demand as an educator and clinician.
